Aquarion Supervisor, Robert Page, Receives Award from Water for People

BRIDGEPORT — Robert Page, supervisor of Aquarion Water Company's Geographic Information System and Records Management, recently received the Kenneth J. Miller Founders' Award from Water For People in honor of his volunteer service to international humanitarian endeavors.

Page has been involved with WFP and its sponsor organization, the American Water Works Association, for 12 years. During that time he has served as chairman of the AWWA's Connecticut section, conducted presentations, and recruited new members.

In March 2007, he participated in a mapping and assessment team from World Water Corps to several communities in Honduras, where they helped locals improve quality of life by mapping out water facilities, conducting sanitary surveys and administering water quality tests. This year, Page joined a similar team in Nicaragua.

In further recognition of Page's humanitarian work, Aquarion CEO Charles V. Firlotte recently honored Page with the company's Laurel Award for outstanding employee volunteerism to educational, civic and community service organizations. In connection with the award, Aquarion is donating $500 to Water For People in Page's name.

Aquarion Water Co., headquartered in Bridgeport, is a public water supply company serving 700,000 people in 44 communities throughout Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, including much of Fairfield County. It is among the ten largest investor-owned water utility companies in the U.S. and last year celebrated its 150th anniversary.
